08/05/1945

Dear Diary,

Today was one of the most extraordinary day because it was the day that Hitler surrendered against us, but it was also a very sad day because thousands of people died to keep us safe. I am very thankful for the soldiers that fought for us. I am even more grateful for soldiers who died while battling for us. To celebrate this astonishing day, I went outside to go to my friends. Helpful and exultant, my friends and I went to a street party, after that we went back home from having a very action-packed day. During this eventful day, a former royal navy went missing. To be honest, it was a bit sad because people bravely lost their lives. Also, their families were devastated because of this tragic event. In addition, they missed the happiness that we felt when Germany surrendered.

In my opinion, I think this is a miraculous, depressing and proud day. I think that England will get better as the years go by. I hope this day will carry on getting celebrated because it is a memorable day to remember the soldiers that fought to give the U.K. a better life and future.

Yours Sincerely,
Jonathan Goodwin.